

This is Google's cache of <http://www.neogaf.com/forum/showthread.php?t=379138>. It is a snapshot of the page as it appeared on 8 Aug 2011 03:27:53 GMT. The current page could have changed in the meantime. Learn more

Text-only version

User Name

.....

Log in

Save?

ADVERTISE TOS PRIVACY

Search

GAMING

OFF-TOPIC

COMMUNITY

Page 1 of 3 1 2 3 Next >

My body is weird.

Thread Tools

Kinitari

Black Canada Mafia
(11-07-2009, 06:56 PM)

My body is weird.

#1

Yeah I know, everyone is unique and has a special body blah blah blah, sometimes though I feel as though there are things about my body that are just plain weird. For example, my arms don't fully bend/extend at the elbow. where as a normal person can fully straighten out their arm, mine will always have a slight bend at the elbow - heck some people can bend it so far it straightens then bends again in the other direction. I've never heard of someone having this problem (and no, I've never broken my arms, or anything).

Another one is my clicking/popping jaws. I've had them since I was 16, and I remember a doctor telling me that there is no (worthwhile) fix to the problem, and that it is actually pretty common. Doesn't stop it from being annoying as all hell sometimes, even after all these years, I am not completely used to it.. I wish it would just go away :(.

Those are just some of my weird quirks about my body, I guess if that's the worst I have to complain about, I shouldn't even bother considering there are paraplegics and quadrapalegics and palsied people who have to live with life changing differences in their bodies.

Still... I figure if I heard some other (minor) quirks with peoples bodies, I wouldn't feel so weird. So... uhhh.... tell me yours. Or don't, whatever.

NomarTyme

Watched Around the World
in 80 Days...
(11-07-2009, 06:57 PM)

Originally Posted by Kinitari:

Yeah I know, everyone is unique and has a special body blah blah blah, sometimes though I feel as though there are things about my body that are just plain weird. For example, my arms don't fully bend/extend at the elbow. where as a normal person can fully straighten out their arm, mine will always have a slight bend at the elbow - heck some people can bend it so far it straightens then bends again in the other direction. I've never heard of someone having this problem (and no, I've never broken my arms, or anything).

#2

Another one is my clicking/popping jaws. I've had them since I was 16, and I remember a doctor telling me that there is no (worthwhile) fix to the problem, and that it is actually pretty common. Doesn't stop it from being annoying as all hell sometimes, even after all these years, I am not completely used to it... I wish it would just go away :(.

Those are just some of my weird quirks about my body, I guess if that's the worst I have to complain about, I shouldn't even bother considering there are parapalegics and quadrapalegics and palsied people who have to live with live changing differences in their bodies.

Still... I figure if I heard some other (minor) quirks with peoples bodies, I wouldn't feel so weird. So... uhhh.... tell me yours. Or don't, whatever.

Ditto.

Crumpet Trumpet

Member
(11-07-2009, 06:58 PM)

Originally Posted by NomarTyme:

Ditto.

I've got that too, it is pretty damn annoying at times.

#3

Defcon

Banned
(11-07-2009, 06:59 PM)

Originally Posted by NomarTyme:

Ditto.

.

#4

Rocket Punch

Member
(11-07-2009, 06:59 PM)

My earthen vessel is perfect.

#5

Dirk Shmiggler

Junior Member
(11-07-2009, 07:02 PM)

we all have our quirks. no body is perfect...

I can blow air out of my eyeballs, for real. That and if i press on my eyes, they make squishy air sounds... What this means

#6

	i have no idea. sinuses obviously, but, blowing air out of my tear ducts??? weird., you can actually hear the rushing air. My one eye doesn't cross when i cross them, looks pretty weird in a mirror, one stays put, other goes in.... I'm sure i have others... just makes me, me. Does any of it mean anything?... probably not.. we're all special.. yay!
-COOLIO- Wrong on fighting games (11-07-2009, 07:02 PM) 	when i press my index finger to the center of my palm i activate thrusters in my feet. #7
Iethial Member (11-07-2009, 07:02 PM)	Originally Posted by Kinitari: Yeah I know, everyone is unique and has a special body blah blah blah, sometimes though I feel as though there are things about my body that are just plain weird. For example, my arms don't fully bend/extend at the elbow. where as a normal person can fully straighten out their arm, mine will always have a slight bend at the elbow - heck some people can bend it so far it straightens then bends again in the other direction. I've never heard of someone having this problem (and no, I've never broken my arms, or anything). Another one is my clicking/popping jaws. I've had them since I was 16, and I remember a doctor telling me that there is no (worthwhile) fix to the problem, and that it is actually pretty common. Doesn't stop it from being annoying as all hell sometimes, even after all these years, I am not completely used to it... I wish it would just go away :(.  Those are just some of my weird quirks about my body, I guess if that's the worst I have to complain about, I shouldn't even bother considering there are paraplegics and quadraplegics and palsied people who have to live with life changing differences in their bodies. Still... I figure if I heard some other (minor) quirks with peoples bodies, I wouldn't feel so weird. So... uhhh.... tell me yours. Or don't, whatever. Freak. #8
Mana Sin Member (11-07-2009, 07:02 PM)	Originally Posted by Rocket Punch: My earthen vessel is perfect. Excellent, I will be moving in around a week from now. #9

NimbusD Member (11-07-2009, 07:06 PM)	#10 Could be worse.
Beardz Member (11-07-2009, 07:07 PM) 	#11 Originally Posted by NimbusD: Could be worse.  :lol :lol :lol fuck, I love that photo!
Inferno313 Member (11-07-2009, 07:08 PM) 	#12 Many of my joints crack, or pop, like your jaw frequently and I'm only 16 O_o.. Every time I rotate my right ankle it pops. Every time I extend my elbows to a great degree, such as when stretching, they pop. Every time I rotate my right wrist it pops. I also have a misshapen chest.. In which it seems to protrude out in the middle, I believe it's Pectus Carinatum, also known as Pidgeon Chest. It's pretty mild though. It's not dangerous or anything, just kind of unattractive, IMO.
Ferrio Banned (11-07-2009, 07:09 PM) 	#13

EVERYONE POOPS

By Taro Gomi

KM Kane/Miller Book Publishers

pakkit

Member

(11-07-2009, 07:10 PM)

I can't look away from that picture. :lol :lol

#14

John Dunbar

correct about everything

I think I have a sunken chest. It doesn't look as bad as the results I get on Google and doctors have never said anything

#15

(11-07-2009, 07:13 PM)	about it (and I haven't asked), but it definitely seems to be more hollow than most chests I've seen.
Topher Paper or plastic? (11-07-2009, 07:13 PM) 	#16 My eyes are super sensitive to wind and light. Sometimes they start watering uncontrollably for no reason. It keeps me from going out sometimes.
Rocket Punch Member (11-07-2009, 07:13 PM) 	#17 Originally Posted by NimbusD: Could be worse. good lawd~!
MedHead Member (11-07-2009, 07:15 PM) 	#18 I'm not special. These are oddities that many people have, but some people still find them unsettling. My knees make cracking noises when I bend down. People who don't have creaky knees tend to be disturbed by the noises, even though my knees only produce minor sounds in comparison to some I've heard. I can make the top of my head move from flexing the muscles that raise my eyebrows. When I was young, the padding between the bones of my feet couldn't keep up with my growth spurt, so nearly every night for a couple years I would end up crawling around the house from the pain of standing. Even now I tend to be unable to handle shock to my feet like others I know. Potentially because of either my back injury or the subsequent surgery to repair it, my coccyx (tailbone) seems to go "out of joint" every once in a while, causing pain when sitting. I have to wiggle around a bit until I feel it pop back into place to make the pain go away. I haven't had this diagnosed by a doctor, so I'm just explaining what it feels like to me.
Medalion Member (11-07-2009, 07:17 PM)	#19 This whole situation has just gotten so upside-down face.

tenritsu

Banned

(11-07-2009, 07:18 PM)

Originally Posted by NimbusD:

Could be worse.

Oh. My. God. :lol :lol :lol

#20

besada

comes complete with an Xbox nosering

(11-07-2009, 07:22 PM)

I have photic sneeze reflex. I sneeze uncontrollably when walking out into bright sunlight.

#21

Solstice

Member

(11-07-2009, 07:25 PM)

Originally Posted by Dirk Shmiggler:

we all have our quirks. no body is perfect...

I can blow air out of my eyeballs, for real. That and if i press on my eyes, they make squishy air sounds... What this means i have no idea. sinuses obviously, but, blowing air out of my tear ducts??? weird., you can actually hear the rushing air. My one eye doesn't cross when i cross them, looks pretty weird in a mirror, one stays put, other goes in....

I'm sure i have others... just makes me, me.

Does any of it mean anything?... probably not.. we're all special.. yay!

I can do this, too, sometimes.

#22

mjc

Member

I have a hollow chest I suppose, although it's more like my ribcage is pushed up and out from it's normal position.

#23

(11-07-2009, 07:25 PM)

I can basically eat Fruit Loops out of it if I tried.

Subliminal

Junior Member

(11-07-2009, 07:26 PM)

My second toe is longer than my big toe.

I get cramps when I put socks on in a certain way.

#24

sinxtanx

Member

(11-07-2009, 07:28 PM)

Originally Posted by Topher:

My eyes are super sensitive to wind and light. Sometimes they start watering uncontrollably for no reason. It keeps me from going out sometimes.

I thought I was alone with this. Not so bad that it keeps me from going out though.

#25

Wads

Member

(11-07-2009, 07:30 PM)

Originally Posted by Kinitari:

Yeah I know, everyone is unique and has a special body blah blah blah, sometimes though I feel as though there are things about my body that are just plain weird. For example, my arms don't fully bend/extend at the elbow. where as a normal person can fully straighten out their arm, mine will always have a slight bend at the elbow - heck some people can bend it so far it straightens then bends again in the other direction. I've never heard of someone having this problem (and no, I've never broken my arms, or anything).

Yeah - I can bend my elbows the opposite direction... I think that's fairly rare too though - I've never met anybody else that could do that as well, but I suppose it's also not something you ask people either.

#26

RJNavarrete

Member
(11-07-2009, 07:30 PM)

Originally Posted by besada:

I have photic sneeze reflex. I sneeze uncontrollably when walking out into bright sunlight.

Same. :lol :lol

#27

Tntnbltn

Member
(11-07-2009, 07:30 PM)

Originally Posted by besada:

I have photic sneeze reflex. I sneeze uncontrollably when walking out into bright sunlight.

Now we're talking.

+1

#28

ahoyhoy

Member
(11-07-2009, 07:30 PM)

I have this: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Funnel_chest. Not nearly as bad as the photo, though, but still bad enough to create a slightly irregular heart beat and restrict lung expansion enough to make cardiovascular exercise more difficult than for a normal person (when I was young they thought I had asthma until they recognized this as the cause.)

#29

siddx

Magnificent Eager Mighty
Brilliantly Erect
Registereduser
(11-07-2009, 07:34 PM)

I was told my clicking/popping jaw was due to me grinding my teeth excessively while I slept. Sure enough when I started wearing a mouth guard while I slept, the clicking and popping stopped.

#30

xelios

Universal Access can be found under System Preferences
(11-07-2009, 07:34 PM)

Originally Posted by ahoyhoy:

I have this: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Funnel_chest. Not nearly as bad as the photo, though, but still bad enough to create a slightly irregular heart beat and restrict lung expansion enough to make cardiovascular exercise more difficult than for a normal person (when I was young they thought I had asthma until they recognized this as the cause.)

I knew a guy named Chase in high school who had that. His sternum was all caved in, I remember him taking his shirt off in the locker room and showing us.

Anyway, what don't I like about my body. My eyes are really sensitive to light too, and sometimes when I'm chewing I have that pop in my jaw/ear. Didn't have enough room for my wisdom teeth to come in properly. Most of my body hair is like soft little golden hairs that shine in the light, even on my arms. Wish it was all darker.

Thank God I have an innie though, outies creep me out. :lol

#31

Tater Tot

"My God... it's full of Starch!"
(11-07-2009, 07:34 PM)

I got this. Poland syndrome (also Poland's syndrome, Poland's syndactyly, Poland sequence,[1] and Poland's anomaly) is a rare birth defect characterized by underdevelopment or absence of the chest muscle (pectoralis) on one side of the body and (but not always) webbing of the fingers (cutaneous syndactyly) of the hand on the same side (ipsilateral hand) mostly common on the right side of body and found more in males than females.

Source:http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Poland_syndrome

(theres a NSFW pic on the lower portion)

It's not really that bad, it could be worse.

#32

Medalion

Member
(11-07-2009, 07:37 PM)

#33

xelios Universal Access can be found under System Preferences (11-07-2009, 07:37 PM) 	#34 Originally Posted by Tater Tot: I got this. Poland syndrome Do you have the webbing of the fingers? Is there a fix for that or does it hinder you in any way?
Dax01 Member (11-07-2009, 07:38 PM) 	#35 I poop every now and then.
Tater Tot "My God... it's full of Starch!" (11-07-2009, 07:39 PM)	#36 Originally Posted by xelios: Do you have the webbing of the fingers? Is there a fix for that or does it hinder you in any way? No I didn't get that. Poland syndrome hasn't really affected me. I played sports through out HS and with weightlifting I just have to try harder in the Bench press. The right side (affected area) tends to give out because I have no muscle there I am substituting it with the anterior deltoid and tricep. It just means I have to work harder, and my gfs didn't really care.
Bowser Arians Nation supporter (11-07-2009, 07:40 PM)	#37 I have the popping jaw problem too, fucking annoying :(

The Main Event

Member

(11-07-2009, 07:40 PM)

Originally Posted by NimbusD:

Could be worse.

Best picture I've seen in quite a while :lol

#38

Xavien

Member

(11-07-2009, 07:45 PM)

Sometimes I have this build-up of pressure around my neck and the base of my skull, it only goes away when i click my neck.

Sometimes, i also get a build-up of pressure in my ear and jaw, but that fucker wont go away for days and it hurts sometimes (like that build-up when going up in a plane and you wait for your ears to pop? except this is on the ground and it doesn't pop).

#39

corkscrewblow

Member

(11-07-2009, 08:00 PM)

Quote:

My body is weird.

#40

	Damn Galka
seal_club Junior Member (11-07-2009, 08:02 PM)	HERE WE GO! a bunch of my ribs on the left hand side seem to curl back inwards [I DON'T KNOW] and when i eat too much i feel a kind of rib-grinding fuckery, i have a weird tailbone nubbin, as though i had a tail once and it was cut off [my parents deny it but i'm skeptical] when i walk, there's a clicking in my right ear directly proportional to the amount of bounce i place in my stride, my middle toes are perma-curled, one of my clavicles sticks out more than the other. i win the freak race. YEAH! ;_; for everyone with dipped chests - it's called pectus excavatum. unless it's significant you'll be fine.	#41
OMG Aero Member (11-07-2009, 08:16 PM)	I can't bend either of my thumbs without bending the index finger on that hand as well. Because of this I can't actually play a PSP because I press the right shoulder button when I go to press another button.	#42
edgefusion Member (11-07-2009, 08:44 PM)	I have really bad tinnitus and sometimes late at night I want to kill myself.	#43

CharlieDigital

Has No Sense Of Humor
(11-07-2009, 08:49 PM)

#44

Originally Posted by NimbusD:

Could be worse.

NomarTyme

Watched Around the World
in 80 Days...
(11-07-2009, 08:51 PM)

Originally Posted by edg fusion:

I have really bad tinnitus and sometimes late at night I want to kill myself.

I feel for ya buddy, but it rarely keeps me up at night. My computer drown out the noise...

butzopower

brain butz

(11-07-2009, 08:56 PM)

99% of the time I can't see a red cardinal in a green tree.

#46

Door2Dawn

named his dong Barney

(11-07-2009, 08:57 PM)

Originally Posted by CharlieDigital:

#47

what

Wormdundee

Member

(11-07-2009, 09:02 PM)

Originally Posted by ahoyhoy:

#48

	I have this: http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Funnel_chest. Not nearly as bad as the photo, though, but still bad enough to create a slightly irregular heart beat and restrict lung expansion enough to make cardiovascular exercise more difficult than for a normal person (when I was young they thought I had asthma until they recognized this as the cause.) At least I'm not the only one. I also have pectus excavatum, although not nearly as bad the picture on the wiki page. As much as I like to pretend otherwise, it has produced the psychological effects described on that page. I have a horrendous fear of taking my shirt off and it destroys confidence in yourself pretty handily. Whenever I can I force myself to take my shirt off but its a really hard thing to do. Being a mutant sucks :(
weepy Member (11-07-2009, 09:05 PM)	Originally Posted by Kinitari: Another one is my clicking/popping jaws. I've had them since I was 16, and I remember a doctor telling me that there is no (worthwhile) fix to the problem, and that it is actually pretty common. Doesn't stop it from being annoying as all hell sometimes, even after all these years, I am not completely used to it.. I wish it would just go away :(. Whoa, so the clicky jaw can't be fixed? My dentist recommended me to someone that he said would help me with the clicking and popping..
dasein Member (11-07-2009, 09:06 PM)	damn gaf's freaks are all suddenly out of the closet

GAMING

OFF-TOPIC

COMMUNITY

Page 1 of 3 1 2 3 Next >

Thread Tools